NATURAL MARBLE WALL TILES

From ancient temples to modern day interiors, natural marble wall tiles have long been used to create an air of luxury and refinement. There are many different varieties of marble to choose from, each with different tones, variations and veining. Jade marbles for example will show varying shades of minty green while natural stones such as Carrara or Calacatta marbles will include a soft white backdrop with naturally occurring streaks or veins.

Our luxurious natural Calacatta marble wall tiles are available in a range of trending and timeless shapes to help you create a luxurious look in your next bathroom design project.

When selecting natural stone wall tiles for bathroom design schemes, it is important to note that as these materials are porous, they will require a little more attention and care during their application and throughout their lifespan. Natural stone wall tiles will require sealing and as the material can be sensitive to staining prior to being treated, the tiles should be sealed prior to their application so as to avoid staining or marking from tile adhesives and grouts.

Once this process is completed, your new wall tiles should be well protected against dirt, grime and marking however, it is still recommended that any spills or splashes be thoroughly cleaned off the tiles fairly quickly. Your natural stone wall tiles should then be sealed once every few years thereafter depending on their wear to ensure a quality finish over time.

Although there is some extra care involved in properly maintaining your new tiles, the luxurious and elegant finish natural stone provides is simply unparalleled, making for a refined look in the bathroom that will last a lifetime.

HANDMADE & HANDMADE-LOOK WALL TILES

Offering an earthy and charming quality to the bathroom, handmade (or handmade-look) tiles create a strong sense of character in any design. These tiles will often feature bold and beautifully saturated colours along with a sleek, high-gloss glaze that is applied by hand and then baked onto the surface of the tiles to create a smooth and glass-like water resistant finish. This glaze allows for a very simple to maintain surface finish that will not require sealing, making handmade tiles a breeze to keep clean in the bathroom.
