FEATURE PATTERN TILES FOR POOLS

Thanks to the strength and durability of glazed porcelain, you will find many lustrous options available that are suitable for use in your new pool. Porcelain tiles are a non-porous form of ceramic tile. These tiles are created using the same raw materials as ceramic tiles however they are glazed and baked at much higher temperatures, resulting in a harder tile with a non-porous finish that will not absorb liquids. These tiles can be made in just about any shape, allowing you to create a stylish personal touch in your new pool design.

Thanks to their smaller size, the individual tiles can be arranged into a variety of custom patterns and even intricate murals to create a colourful experience in your new indoor or outdoor pool. Glass mosaic tiles are sold in sheet formats; netted mesh sheets, often measuring 30 x 30cm are used as a backing to keep each individual tile in place during the laying process.

PORCELAIN POOL TILES

Porcelain tiles are renowned for their incredible strength, longevity and durability. Their non-porous nature ensures they will not absorb moisture, making them an ideal solution as a pool tile. It should be noted that only specific porcelain tile collections are suitable as a pool option so it is always recommended that you check with your Perini Tiles Consultant on the specific recommendations of your tile selections prior to locking in your choices. As with glass tiles, porcelain tiles are also available in a range of colours, shapes and patterns, allowing you to create a stunning pool area in your home.

Unlike glass tiles however, porcelain tiles will feature a flat, solid colour. Where glass tiles allow for a play on the light entering the pool's water with their translucent qualities, porcelain tiles will provide more of a solid, grounded feel in your design scheme.
